

Reclaiming the Political in Latin American History

ESSAYS FROM THE NORTH Edited by Gilbert M. Joseph

Duke University Press Durham and London 2001

Contents

Acknowledgments vii

I

The Politics of Writing Latin American History

Gilbert M. Joseph, Reclaiming “the Political” at the Turn of the Millennium 3

Emilia Viotti da Costa, New Publics, New Politics, New Histories: From Economic Reductionism to Cultural Reductionism—in Search of Dialectics 17

Steve J. Stern, Between Tragedy and Promise: The Politics of Writing Latin American History in the Late Twentieth Century 32

II

The Contestation of Historical Narratives and Memory

Barbara Weinstein, The Decline of the Progressive Planter and the Rise of Subaltern Agency: Shifting Narratives of Slave Emancipation in Brazil 81

Mary Ann Mahony, A Past to Do Justice to the Present: Collective Memory, Historical Representation, and Rule in Bahia’s Cacao Area 102

Jeffrey L. Gould, Revolutionary Nationalism and Local Memories in El Salvador 138

III

Articulating the Political: The Intersection of Class, Race, Gender, Sexuality, and Generation

Diana Paton, *The Flight from the Fields Reconsidered:
Gender Ideologies and Women's Labor
After Slavery in Jamaica* 175

Greg Grandin, A More Onerous Citizenship: Illness, Race, and Nation in Republican Guatemala 205

Thomas Miller Klubock, Nationalism, Race, and the Politics of Imperialism: Workers and North American Capital in the Chilean Copper Industry 231

Heidi Tinsman, Good Wives, Bad Girls, and Unfaithful Men: Sexual Negotiation and Labor Struggle in Chile's Agrarian Reform, 1964–73 268

IV

Historians and the Making of History

Florencia E. Mallon, *Bearing Witness in Hard Times:
Ethnography and Testimonio in a Postrevolutionary Age* 311

Daniel James, *Afterword: A Final Reflection
on the Political* 355

Contributors 365

Index 367

Acknowledgments

This collection, a labor of love on the part of the editor and contributors, affords us a means of celebrating the distinguished career of our mentor and colleague Emilia Viotti da Costa. The volume originated in the homenagem to Emilia at Yale University over the course of several days in May 1998 on the occasion of her completion of twenty-five years of service to the university. My first debt, then, is to thank Yale's History Department, Council on Latin American and Iberian Studies, and Center for International and Area Studies for sponsoring the conference "Reclaiming 'the Political' in Latin American History," and the Kempf Memorial Fund at Yale and the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation for providing the lion's share of funding. Their support enabled us to host thirty of Emilia's former graduate students and closest colleagues, who gathered in New Haven not only to honor Emilia's agenda-setting scholarship and provocative teaching, but for stimulating and often rambunctious debate—with Emilia characteristically leading by example. Her contribution to this volume originally served as the keynote address for the Yale conference in her honor. In addition to the colleagues whose work appears in this volume, we are also extremely grateful to Marjorie Becker, Susan Besse, Nelson Boeira, José Celso de Castro Alves, John French, Seth Garfield, Steven Hahn, Kathleen Higgins, Reeve Huston, Michael Jiménez, Bryan McCann, David Montgomery, Muriel Nazzari, Julio Pinto, David Sanders, Stuart Schwartz, James Scott, Sol Serrano, and Peter Winn, whose formal and informal intervenciones in New Haven substantially improved the discussion in these pages.

Thanks also go to Nancy Phillips, then senior administrator of the Council on Latin American Studies, for her deft logistical management of an event that gathered together the members of Emilia's far-flung intellectual clan from across the length and breadth of the Americas. Nancy and I were ably assisted by a campus committee of Latin American history doctoral students (two of whom have subsequently graduated and taken up full-time academic positions elsewhere): Seth Garfield (now at the University of Texas, Austin), Bryan McCann (University of Arkansas), David Sanders, Amy Chazkel, José Celso de Castro Alves, Andrew Sackett, and Todd Hartch.

As we moved from the conference to the book, I was aided by Barbara Weinstein and Heidi Tinsman in selecting this volume's ensemble of essays. (Emilia set the parameters somewhat in requesting that the volume focus on the work of her North American students.) Editorial and clerical costs associated with the preparation of the book were covered by a grant to Yale's Latin American Council from the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation. The manuscript benefited immeasurably from close readings by Brooke Larson and Peter Winn; and the essays by Steve Stern, Heidi Tinsman, and me are much the better for the commentary provided by Catherine LeGrand—and the lively exchange with the audience that ensued—at the panel “Reclaiming ‘the Political’ in Latin American History” during the January 2000 meeting of the American Historical Association. Yale doctoral student J. T. Way provided valuable help in preparing the final manuscript. As always, I have been supported at every stage of my editorial work by my editor and dear friend at the Duke University Press, Valerie Millholland.