ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The present study would not exist without the encouragement and mentorship I received since my early academic career in the United States by my esteemed professors: the late José Regueiro, who supervised my first incursions in the theater of the Spanish Golden Age, Marina S. Brownlee, Ignacio J. López, Mercedes Juliá, and Carmen Peraita.

My dear friends and colleagues were generous with their time and knowledge reading and commenting on drafts of the chapters in this book: Francie Cate Arries, J. Guillermo De los Reyes, Kyra Kietrys, Jane Marcus Delgado, Gerry Milligan, and Mark Sample.

I thank the Professional Staff Congress of the City University of New York for their financial support during my research leave, and for assisting with the publication of this volume. I also thank the Office of the Dean of Humanities and Social Sciences of the College of Staten Island for their contribution towards the cost of illustrations.

Earlier versions of Chapters III and VI appeared in Viator and Bulletin of the Comediantes respectively. I appreciate their generosity allowing me to reuse that material for this book. I need to mention the professional assistance of the institutions that helped me gather the sources that sustain this work: the Biblioteca Nacional in Madrid, The National Archives of the United Kingdom, the British Library, and the Library of the University of Pennsylvania. I acknowledge also the diligence and professionalism of the staff of the Interlibrary Loan Office of the College of Staten Island who gave me prompt access to publications held in difficult locations. I also would like to mention Eva Reichenberger and her team for their patience and comments along the process of edition and publication of this work.

On a personal note, I would like to acknowledge the support of my friends, my family away from home, Asima, Jesús, Jim, Luis Miguel, Paola, Ram, Ricardo, Robert, Yaye, and especially Michael Stara; my partner Brett Oberman; and my parents, siblings, and extended family in Spain, who have been very understanding of the physical distance that my professional career has put between us.
